Another and important feature has brought into the case by Albert who said that between 2 and 3 o'clock last Tuesday afternoon he saw a strange negro leave the road that runs by the Rasinger home and go into a adjoining it. Detectives are seeking this negro.

That he may have been the murderer of Mrs. Rasinger is now regarded as highly probable by many officials,

The neighbors are convinced that the urder was the work of some negro, as this particular section of New Jersey is infested by a notorious set of blacks. The white citizens say they will take no chances with the negro population, and that among the latter they are sure the murderer of Mrs. Rasinger is hiding. Since his wife's death Rasinger has maintained a calm, stoical demeanor that did not change even when he was placed under arrest. His speech is otonous, and his actions calm, slow intact and there was one empty one in the closet. There must have been six, as two shots were fired.

"There is no likelihood that Mrs. Rasinger was killed by a stranger. She was so close to her husband that she could have summoned him by simply raising her voice. Nobody had been seen in the road for some time and the watch-BRIDGETON, N. J., Oct. 21.—Mrs. dog did not bark. Even Rasinger has admitted that his wife could not have been killed by any one outside the household.

to death in her home, was buried today, and her husband, in custody of the authorities as a witness, was the chief mourner. Rasinger, who is a stoic and takes his detention in the case as a matter of course, showed much grief during the funeral services, at which Rev. E. V. Saunders, pastor of the Seventh Day Advent Church at Shiloh, officiated.

Again as his wife's body was lowered into the grave in the little cemetery in Saltoh. his emotion was marked and the throng of neighbors and curious persons who crowded about him, showed their sympathy with him.

Taken Back to Jail.

Rasinger was in charge of Detective Lore and immediately after the burial was taken back to jail to await arraignment later before a Magistrate.

Household.

In one detail, it is claimed. Rasinger's statement is apparently not borne out by the facts. He said he had been at work sorting potatoes an hour and a half. He had sorted only one bushel in all, and that work should not have taken over fifteen minutes.

The overalls worn by Rasinger on Tuesday have, it is claimed, disappeared.
Constable Lorenzo Woodruff saw them in the barn on his first investigation, and as there were curious applies on them lifted a frapdoor and threw them down for safe keeping. When he looked for them later they were missing. Nobody would admit having removed them.

Rasinger had worn the same suit from the time of the murder until vesterday. when he went to Bridgeton and got a black serge suit for the funeral.

Mrs. Wentzel, mother of the murdered wife, declares her belief in Rasinger's innocence. She says Rasinger and her daughter loved each other too much and were too happy to ever have any such ending to both the case as a taken back to jail to await arraignment later before a Magistrate.

at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, was accused of violating section 25, division 2, of the election law by mutilating the registration records of the Ninth Election District of the Twenty-first Assembly District.

Detectives Shaw and McManus, of the One Hundredth street station, charged Corscaden with entering the polling booth at No. 2517 Broadway and inscribing his own name on the public copy of voters or a day not set spart for registration.

The defendant said that last Wednesday he went into the place, which is a barber shop, and said he wished to register, as he feared he would not be able to do so to-day or to-morrow. The bar ber, he said, told him to go ahead, and the defendant took the public record book (which is kept in the polling booth prior to election for public inspection) and entered his name.

The detectives went to the polling place last night to look through the list
